When working on a problem or injury on the body, this information can be helpful to know and understand the source of the problem.

A problem or injury on the right side would deal with something masculine in their life - a relationship like a brother, father, son, or it could be a masculine trait like protection or assertiveness.

A problem on the left side could be from a feminine relationship - sister, mother, daughter, or a feminine quality like nurturing or charity.

If the problem is on the front of the body, then it is probably something conscious.

If the problem is on the back side of the body, it is probably processing in the subconscious level and may be difficult to identify.
